

All the best,

A handwritten signature in black ink, which is Barack Obama's signature. It is written in a cursive, flowing style. The signature starts with a large 'B' and ends with a long horizontal stroke.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

May 2, 2016

Ms. Kraft's Class
Boeing Learning Center
Washington, D.C.

Dear Students:

Thank you for writing. Letters like yours mean a lot to me, and they remind me why I ran for this Office in the first place.

Being President has been the greatest privilege of my life, and while my term is coming to an end at the beginning of next year, that doesn't mean I'll stop fighting to make sure doors of opportunity are wide open for you and your generation. That is a promise I will never stop working to keep. And once I leave the White House, I'll be counting on young people like you to step up and get involved—because we all share a lasting responsibility to bring about real and meaningful change that will make our Nation stronger.

Wherever your talents and interests take you, always remember that nothing is beyond your reach so long as you are willing to dream big and work hard. America is depending on students like you to build a brighter tomorrow, and I know there are no limits to what you can achieve.

Thank you, again, for your kind note. Your generation gives me great hope for the future, and I trust you'll stay engaged in our democracy.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to be Barack Obama's signature, written in a cursive style with a large initial 'B' and a long horizontal stroke at the end.